Comments <sup>Remains of</sup> Den 1. E. Davies 1929 Prehistoric & Roman Denbighshire, 216-8. Fig. 64 shows front face (photo). Found when cutting deep trench or drain, c. 2½ ft. under the surface. "It lay in a stratum of clay boggy ground. It appears to have been fixed to a handle or staff by leather thongs or iron fastenings" (note apparently made near time of discovery). Davies says that this cell 'shows unmistakable signs of having been hoisted, there being around the middle a band of brown stained surface.' (p. 218). This appears to show clearly on Davies' photo, but there's nothing totally convincing on the object itself. Most of the band seems to be differentially stained 'impurities' in flint, but there are suggestions of a clearer band on the photo cell that it now has: a b/w photo of it now would make comparison easier.
